FIND HIGH EXPLOSIVE NEAR ROSS

It was during the steel strike that Vavrek first came to the attention of the Gary authorities. He was known to have been affiliated with the radical and Red movement which was flourishing in and about Gary during the steel strike. On one occasion his home was raided, a quantity of Red literature seized and was brought to the Fourth Division army headquarters and questioned before Col. Mapes, who was in command of the troops. He was detained several hours and released.

It is known that he was decidedly radical in his opinions, advocated overthrowing the government and remarked that the government rulers could not govern the world. He also openly remarked that he was against all forms of government and that it should be blown up and destroyed. During the early part of the steel strike, after he was arrested by the military authorities, Vavrek left for Gary and secured employment in a coal mine at Greensburg, West Moreland county, Pa. There he worked loading coal in cars and in January of this year returned to Gary, carrying the dynamite which he hid in a cache on the Dudas farm in two suit cases. The dynamite was secreted in his home on Grant street for sometime, however, before taking it to the Dudas farm where he had secured a position as a farm hand. The farm at that time was owned by Ralph Stegnaek, who now conducts a soft drink parlor at 1690 Washington street in Gary.

According to Stegnaek in a statement to the authorities Vavrek was employed on his farm from March until July of this year. It was when he became acquainted with Vavrek's character that he discharged him. It was when he was giving Vavrek his money at 1690 Washington street that Vavrek cursed him and said "Dam you I'll blow you up." Three weeks ago before Vavrek left Gary, he met Stegnaek on the street and asked him for a loan of $50 and when his former employer refused the loan, Vavrek again threatened him. "If I get mad I'll blow up a lot of people in Gary," he said, "and I am going to put poison in the food and kill a lot of people that had me arrested for beating my child."

According to Chief Fox and Federal Agent James Rooney this morning Vavrek is to be brought back to Gary and after securing additional evidence, will be taken before Judge Anderson. From now on the case will be handled through Indianapolis. Other witnesses in the case are now being questioned and other important and scholastic evidence will probably be disclosed. Those sharing in the credits of Vavrek's arrest are Chief of Police Porbitt of Gary, Federal Agent James Rooney, Deputy Sheriff Clem Hentges, Sheriff Lew Barnes and Officers Yanitor, Smelko and O'Brien of the Gary police.

DUBLIN STREETS SWEEP BY RIFLES

BY DANIEL O'CONNELL
(STAFF CORRESPONDENT I. N. SERVICE)
DUBLIN, Oct. 13.—Blasts of rifle and machine gun fire in the streets and military raids have kept Dublin terrorized for 24 hours. At least one army officer and five civilians have been killed, including Thomas Hunter, M. P.

one of the foremost leaders of the Sinn Féiners, Hunter and a British detective were both killed by machine gun fire while struggling in the street.

The detective had grappled with Hunter to place him under arrest, and both were reaching into their pockets for pistols when struck down. There were a number of raids by soldiers during the night and volleys were fired frequently.

Hunter was commander of the Third Irish republican army. He was sentenced to death after the Dublin uprising in 1914, but was reprieved. He was re-arrested in 1917, but escaped.

Magistrate Moore and Magistrate Hyde of Mullingar, mysteriously disappeared while motoring near that town said a dispatch from Mullingar.

COX FAILS IN WEST

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Governor Cox has failed utterly in his effort to sell the Wilson league of nations to the voters west of the Mississippi river. declares Governor W. L. Harding of Iowa, who has been on Cox's trail through the northwestern states. "The voters who went Democratic four years ago still remember that they did so on the specific promise that Mr. Wilson would keep them out of war. Now Gov. Cox comes back with the same promise, that a vote for the Wilson league will keep them out of war again. Cox has failed miserably in creating any support and that's all there is to it.

"You hear the voters everywhere in the mountain states declare that Mr. Wilson deceived them before and they cannot see how his present panacea for peace will turn out any better than his 1918 promise.

"Cox also sounded a false note in the quick way in which he solved the irrigation problem of the west. Those people out there have been working for thirty years trying to solve that question and they could not appreciate the genius of a fellow who could come to them as a perfect stranger, making his first trip through their country, and tell them how it could be done overnight. Cox appeared too smart to them to be taken seriously. "The voters out west are more serious this time than I have seen them since 1914. It is nothing for them to drive forty or fifty miles across the prairie to attend a political meeting."
